Mayors Message - Kurt Ostler Over these past several years, I have often thought, what makes Highland City, Highland City? My first thoughts evaluate how we are doing as a city. Are we sticking to the city's General Plan "Vision Statement"? (February 2008) Highland City is a "bedroom community" with large residential lots, single-family homes, natural areas, and open space. Highland City is envisioned to be a community that is in harmony with its natural setting. It is a place grounded in its rural heritage and should continue to foster a positive community spirit and a sense of neighborliness. Since 2008, the city has experienced several changes. Some of these changes have been good, but others have caused residents to be concerned by the growth, higher density housing, change in alcohol laws, new roads, traffic, new parks and trails, and meters on pressured irrigation. So what makes us Highland? Highland, Utah, stands out due to several key features and characteristics that define us as a city:

Community Spirit and Safety: Highland is known for its strong sense of community and family-friendly environment. Willing to step in and help one another. As a city, we value education. We are among the highest in the State of Utah in terms of household income and household size. Highland is rated #1 Safest City in Utah for 2024. (safewise.com)

Scenic Beauty and Outdoor Recreation & Parks: Highland is at the base of American Fork Canyon. Its picturesque setting provides stunning views of the surrounding mountains. With over 26 miles of city trails and 27 city parks help to keep the feeling of being open and natural setting. The city has trailheads to the mountainsides, and the Murdock trail goes right through the city.

Growth: Over the past few decades, Highland has experienced significant population growth. This transformation in some areas of the city feels like a suburban community. We have new commercial developments and areas of higher-density housing. Even with those changes, I have noticed we have had great residents move in. The big development of 689 homes over by the Lone Peak High School has helped the city pay off bonds, finish Mountain Ridge Park without incurring any new debt, and helped contribute to keeping city taxes low.

Highland has a history rooted in early pioneer settlement, which is reflected in some of its traditions. This historical aspect adds depth to the city's identity and helps maintain a connection to its past. I believe it is important for us to remember where we came from as we envision where we need to go.

As we move forward, one area I see the city needs to focus on is senior housing and senior activity opportunities. Over the next year, the city will be updating its general plan. My hope is we can incorporate more focus on senior needs. As the city's General Plan is updated, I invite all residents to participate to help shape the vision of Highland City in the future.

Highland Fling—Thank you! As the "H" with a heart illuminated the mountain, Highland City came together to celebrate the Highland Fling Festival. This year's theme, "Hometown Heroes," honored the remarkable individuals who make our community special, from first responders to dedicated volunteers. We are deeply grateful to our event coordinators, Public Works team, communications team, Fling Committee, Council Members, Youth Council Members, and generous sponsors. Their hard work and support were crucial in making the festival a success. The illuminated "H" with a heart symbolizes our appreciation for the residents of Highland. Thank you for being part of this wonderful community. We love you, and look forward to celebrating with you again next year!
