

The Maze – Grace Weston

Once upon a time there were three kids, Lilly, Ron and Beckham. One day they came to a run-down library. Some people said it was haunted, other people said the books come alive. But Lilly, Ron and Beckham decided to go inside the library.

It looked ordinary at first, but then the lights turned off, and they saw a faint glow like light blue in the shape of a large dinosaur. Lilly looked at what row they were in. It said "Row 6 Jurassic Times." Beckham knew a lot about dinosaurs so he realized it was a velociraptor right away. But he didn't know how to handle them.

A book next to Ron flew up and around the shelf next to them and a beam of light flashed above them. Then they heard footsteps behind them. Then a T-rex was looking straight at them and they ran straight into a velociraptor. Right before it could get them, they dicked and ran to the door.

When they got out, they did not recognize where they were until a voice above said "Welcome, new contestants." When they looked around they realized they were in a stadium. They saw a maze in front of them and the voice said, "Let's watch them run the maze." Then there was a box made of metal banging like there was something angry inside of the metal box. The voice above said, "If you win, you get transported to your home. If you lose, you stay here with me forever."

There was a big timer on the wall set to eight minutes. I realized the time was for us to get across and then the loud voice said, "One your mark. Get set. Go!"

When I looked behind me the metal box opened and inside was a tiger. When I looked in front of me, Ron and Beckham were already racing through the maze, so I came after them.

The timer said five minutes left. Two minutes later, we all were half-way through when we came face-to-face with the tiger. I ran the other way. It was a dead end.

I face the tiger and slapped it. Nothing happened. I realized it was a hologram and after that, I ran out of the maze.

Then they escorted us home and they woke up in their bed. Lilly woke up and realized it was all a dream

The End.
